

SOUTHWESTERN WILLOW FLYCATCHER

Knows its songs
instinctively and doesn't need to learn how to sing.

GREATEST THREAT

The riparian habitat these birds depend on has been fragmented, developed, and modified so much that they have few areas left to call home.

HOW CAN YOU HELP?

Write your local, state, and federal officials to let them know you care about the riparian habitat in your area.

Luckily, habitat restoration and improvement projects have had a positive impact on Willow Flycatcher populations. Protecting and restoring more riparian habitat is necessary to continue helping this species.
