

KIRTLAND'S WARBLER

The populations of this bird have rebounded thanks to the rejuvenation of more than 150,000 acres of Jack Pine forests.

GREATEST THREAT

Jack Pine forests, which Kirtland's Warblers depend on, have been aging due to fire suppression.

HOW CAN YOU HELP?

Volunteer for restoration projects in your area or donate to the cause.

The Endangered Species Act in the U.S. and the Bahamas Wild Bird Protection Act conserve Kirtland's Warblers on their breeding and wintering grounds.
