

GREEN-WINGED TEAL

One of the most abundant dabbling ducks, the Green-winged Teal migrates from far northern North America via all major flyways—Pacific, Central, Mississippi, and Atlantic—to wintering grounds that range from coastal British Columbia all the way to Central America.

A small and sturdy duck, it is capable of flying at 60 mph (95kph).

Migrating birds stop over in shallow wetland habitats, marshes, and flooded agricultural fields, and sometimes even forage in small puddles.

Wintering flocks of up to 50,000 teals congregate throughout North America and the Caribbean.
